HOW WE COVER SPORTS

We cover UW sports in five main ways:

1) Recaps
2) Analysis
3) Profiles
4) Columns
5) News

If you have new ideas, you can always try them!

RECAPS ($15-$20)

Recaps are the majority of what we write. Pretty straightforward: recap the game (Who won, score, moments, stats. etc.)

Home Games ($20)

- Attend in person
- Interview coaches/players postgame
- 600-800 words

Away Games ($15)

- Cover the game remotely
- Usually no quotes
- 400-600 words

Sophomore gaurd Avery Howell and Freshman forward Brynn McGaughy block a shot during Washington's game against Minnesota in Alaska Airlines Arena on Jan. 18, 2025.

ANALYSIS ($15-$20)

Analysis pieces are additional content to a game

Things like takeaways, hot takes are analysis

Not mandated, but always good for big games

800-1200 words

The offense huddles during a 30 second timeout during Washington's football game against Michigan at Michigan Stadium on Oct. 18, 2025, in Ann Arbor, Mich.

PROFILES ($25)

Profiles highlight a cool backstory or triumph of a player/coach

Things like a player overcoming injury, traveling overseas, inspiring story are profiles

Include minimum 2-3 sources, including the player/coach

1000-1400 words

Freshman wide receiver Dezmen Roebuck runs for the end zone to score his first career touchdown during Washington's game against UC Davis on Sept. 6, 2025, at Husky Stadium in Seattle.

Dezmen Roebuck was a high school recruit three months ago, now he's one of college football's budding young stars

COLUMNS ($20)

Columns are your chance to voice opinions or thoughts on a topic!

Controversial = clicks, but don't say something just for the sake of getting views

Typically include 1-3 sources

800-1200 words

Quarterback Will Rogers III sits on the ground after keeping the ball and failing to capitalize on a fourth-and-3 during Washington's game against Indiana on October 26, 2024 at Memorial Stadium in Bloomington, Indiana.

Media: Sean Fan

Jedd Fisch needed to pull the plug on Will Rogers. Now, it might be too late | Sousa

By Andrew Sousa The Daily

Nov. 2, 2024, 7:54 a.m.

NEWS ($10 - $15)

News in Sports? Yes!

Mostly consists of player news (transfer portal, injury, etc.) but can be news about programs overall (Big Ten move)

Usually very brief, most information for these come from X/Insta and UW Athletics

200 - 400 words

Sophomore quarterback Demond Williams Jr. walks off the field after the game against the Purdue Boilermakers on Nov. 15, 2025, at Husky Stadium in Seattle.

Media: Kanoa Shim-Ly

Washington quarterback Demond Williams Jr. announces that he's entering the transfer portal

BEATS

Instead of pitches (primal and lame) we have beats! (classy and professional)

A beat means you are responsible for all coverage of a sport

If you are the beat writer for Men's Basketball, you provide the recaps, analysis, profiles, columns, and news for Men's Basketball!

Other people can provide extra work and fill in where needed, but ultimately it's your sport

We reserve the right to take if you off of a beat if the work consistently doesn't meet The Daily Sports standards

WRITING IS FUN!

As a reporter of Big Ten sports, you will get attention.

Some good!

Great article Jared!!!! External Inbox ×

Tucker , you click baiting sleeze ball! You Jerk FYI, in many areas Michigan is a downgrade , from the best stadium setting in all of sports . You deserve to be tarred and feather and paraded through U of W village!!!!! Quit stirring up the pot for your own selfish reasons, It is because of fools like you college sports is being destroyed!!!!!! I don't know how you look at yourself in Mirror!!!!!!

HOMEWORK

Read a sports article from The Daily Sports

It can be a recap, analysis, profile, column, or news from any sport

Come next week ready to talk about these things:

1) What article did you read?
2) What did you like about the article?
3) What other thoughts did you have about the article? Was anything unclear about the piece?

Next week: How to write an article
